DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: throughout the specification (see page 4, line 15 and 26; page 12, line 26; page 16, line 12; page 18, line 9; page22, line 9) applicants enclose phrases in square brackets. It is unclear what is applicants' intension (either the applicants want to delete those phrases or they are just typographic errors). Appropriate correction is required. On pages 8, lines 17 &22 and page 23, line 4 and 24, applicants also use symbols □ after transition temperature 85, heating temperature of 153 and curing temperature of 110. It appears that applicants intend to use degree Celsius (°C) or degree Fahrenheit (°F) of the temperature measurements. Appropriate correction is required.

Allowance

- 2. Claims 1-20 are allowed.
- 3. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: the closest art, Tanikita et al (US 5,833,889) discloses (see Fig 2a-2b and column 3, lines 39-55) a method of production of light-reflecting component, wherein resin film having concave shape is set into the injection molding apparatus to inject molten resin (6) forming uniform layer of the contoured resin film 1' on the concave surface. However, in Tanikita et al the curved body is not manufactured in a press-molding machine, instead it is formed by placing a preheated resin film 1 on a projection mold (see column 3, lines

Art Unit: 1734

31-38 and Fig. 1). Furthermore, Tanikita et al does not teach a method of manufacturing in which press-molding machine and insert injection-molding machine serially positioned and a cycle of press molding and a cycle of injection molding are performed in synchronized manner to continuously inject the back resin while continuously press molding the curved body. JP-02130113 discloses (see English Translation Abstract) a method of forming reflection layers of lamps by using metal deposition film simultaneously when the lamp housing is injected with synthetic resin adhering the metal layer to the inner surface of the lamp housing with the adhesive layer. JP'113 does not disclose or suggest press-molding the housing and a synchronized method of production. Tanaka et al (US 5,993,723) teaches (see Abstract and column 4, lines 54-56) an injection compression molding method wherein injection screw (part of the machine) retreat performed in the timing in synchronism with closure and compression of the mold. Tanaka et al does not disclose serially positioned press molding and injection molding machines. Prior art of record does not disclose or suggest a method for continuously manufacturing an optical article comprising a first step of thermal press-molding a sheet-like curved body and a second step of insertmolding a back resin on a concave side of the curved body wherein press-molding machine and insert injection-molding machine serially positioned and a cycle of press molding and a cycle of injection molding are performed in synchronized manner to continuously inject the back resin while continuously press molding the curved body.
